BANKS LEILA

A Historical Albanian and English Dictionary (1496-1938) Oxford : Clarendon Press

This comprehensive biography depicts in depth the complex and controversial man who played a significant role in the history of northwestern India during the nineteenth century. Described by his European contemporaries as "the Talleyrand of the East" and the "Ulysses of the hills," Maharaja Gulab Singh was perhaps the most dexterous and successful Indian diplomat of the nineteenth century. At a time when other Indian states were falling to the British, Gulab Singh founded the kingdom of Kashmir, which survived under his heirs for over a century. Based largely on primary sources in English, Persian, and Urdu, this new biography provides fresh insights into Gulab Singh's motives and policies, and brings into focus his role as fiefholder, Raja, and Maharaja, and as a man, soldier, and politician. However, the book is more than a portrait of a man. It sheds light on the entire diplomatic history of northwestern India during the period. This big and important biography is exceptionally well written. The author's narrative skill provides a fascinating picture of the diplomatic intrigue, sadistic tortures, the licentious activities of the Sikh army, and the economic exploitation of the common people.

Writing Self, Writing Empire examines the life, career, and writings of the Mughal state secretary, or munshi, Chandar Bhan "Brahman" (d. c.1670), one of the great Indo-Persian poets and prose stylists of early modern South Asia. Chandar Bhan's life spanned the reigns of four different emperors, Akbar (1556-1605), Jahangir (1605-1627), Shah Jahan (1628-1658), and Aurangzeb 'Alamgir (1658-1707), the last of the "Great Mughals" whose courts dominated the culture and politics of the subcontinent at the height of the empire's power, territorial reach, and global influence. As a high-caste Hindu who worked for a series of Muslim monarchs and other officials, forming powerful friendships along the way, Chandar Bhan's experience bears vivid testimony to the pluralistic atmosphere of the Mughal court, particularly during the reign of Shah Jahan, the celebrated builder of the Taj Mahal. But his widely circulated and emulated works also touch on a range of topics central to our understanding of the court's literary, mystical, administrative, and ethical cultures, while his letters and autobiographical writings provide tantalizing examples of early modern Indo-Persian modes of self-fashioning. Chandar Bhan's oeuvre is a valuable window onto a crucial, though surprisingly neglected, period of Mughal cultural and political history.

Transport Justice develops a new paradigm for transportation planning based on principles of justice. Author Karel Martens starts from the observation that for the last fifty years the focus of transportation planning and policy has been on the performance of the transport system and ways to improve it, without much attention being paid to the persons actually using – or failing to use – that transport system. There are far-reaching consequences of this approach, with some enjoying the fruits of the improvements in the transport system, while others have experienced a substantial deterioration in their situation. The growing body of academic evidence on the resulting disparities in mobility and accessibility, have been paralleled by increasingly vocal calls for policy changes to address the inequities that have developed over time. Drawing on philosophies of social justice, Transport Justice argues that governments have the fundamental duty of providing virtually every person with adequate transportation and thus of mitigating the social disparities that have been created over the past decades. Critical reading for transport planners and students of transportation planning, this book develops a new approach to transportation planning that takes people as its starting point, and justice as its end.

The Problems Of The Aged Have Attracted Serious Attention Of Sociologists And Social Psychologists In The Recent Years. In The West A Number Of Scientific Studies Have Been Published In This Area But There Is A Dearth Of Such Studies In India. Randhawa'S Exposition Of The Life, Problems And Possibilities Of The Aged In Both Rural And Urban Areas Is Well Documented, Tabulated And Researched. The Interaction Of The Aged With Each Other, With The Younger Generations Of Society And Within Their Families Is Exhaustively Analysed. The Writer'S Detailed Correlation Of Different Aspects Of The Lifestyles Of The Elder Citizens Helps In Understanding This Largely Neglected And Growing Segment Of Society. An Interesting Chapter Of This Book Deals With The Beliefs And Attitudes Of The Aged On Controversial Subjects Like Divorce, Widow-Remarriage, Life After Death And Sin And Grace.

This uniquely organized text gives both students and working professionals graphically detailed assistance in understanding the underlying principles of die design, illustrating how these basic engineering principles are easily adapted to a limitless variety of die designs. It divides the design of each die into a series of easy-to-follow steps and illustrates each step in pictorial view and as a portion of an engineering drawing. Materials, punches, die sets, stops, strippers, gages, pilots and presses are covered.
