In questo primo volume della collana "Analyses textuelles", Jean-Claude Ternaux, Éric Lysøe, Gilles Polizzi, Didier Souiller e Ruggero Campagnoli, insieme a un gruppo di ricercatori e studenti, si confrontano attraverso delle riflessioni di critica letteraria relativamente al testo Didon se sacrifiant di Étienne Jodelle. In ogni volume della collana «Analyses textuelles» alcuni critici letterari propongono la loro lettura e interpretazione di uno stesso testo della letteratura francese o francofona, rispondendo alle domande sollevate dalle loro riflessioni durante dei dibattiti internazionali che vengono riportati nei testi. Dans ce volume, Jean-Claude Ternaux, Éric Lysøe, Gilles Polizzi, Didier Souiller et Ruggero Campagnoli, ainsi que d'autres chercheurs et des étudiants, se confrontent à Didon se sacrifiant d'Étienne Jodelle. Dans chaque volume de la collection «Analyses textuelles», des critiques littéraires de formations et de spécialités différentes proposent leur lecture et interprétation d'un même texte de la littérature française ou francophone, et répondent aux questions auxquelles leurs réflexions ont donné lieu.

This collection of articles (the Vercelli conference proceedings) places the theme of scepticism within its philosophical tradition. It explores the English philosophical thinkers, the French context, as well as major Italian figures and Spanish culture. It pays special attention to the relationships between history of philosophical ideas and the problems rising from the history of sciences (medicine, physics, linguistics, historical scholarship) in the 17th and the18th centuries.

In medicine the understanding and interpretation of the complex reality of illness currently refers either to an organismic approach that focuses on the physical or to a 'holistic' approach that takes into account the patient's human sociocultural involvement. Yet as the papers of this collection show, the suffering human person refers ultimately to his/her existential sphere. Hence, praxis is supplemented by still other perspectives for valuation and interpretation: ethical, spiritual, and religious. Can medicine ignore these considerations or push them to the side as being subjective and arbitrary? Phenomenology/philosophy-of-life recognizes all of the above approaches to be essential facets of the Human Condition (Tymieniecka). This approach holds that all the facets of the Human Condition have equal objectivity and legitimacy. It completes the accepted medical outlook and points the way toward a new `medical humanism'.

La Place looks at a daughter's relationship with her father. In a fragmented and retrospective way the narrator describes her feelings of separation and betrayal that arise when education and marriage place her in a social class with different values, language, tastes and behaviour. She explores the ways in which individual experience is related to class and group attitudes and at the same time tells us a great deal about French society in general since the turn of the century. It is a concentrated text, cut through with irony and may be read in different ways. La Place will be an accessible and exciting addition to French studies courses.

In the post-Cold War, post-9/11 era, the immigrant experience has changed dramatically. Despite the recent successes of immigrant and world literatures, there has been little scholarship on how the hardships of immigration are conveyed in immigrant narratives. Translating Pain fills this gap by examining literature from Muslim North Africa, the Caribbean, and Eastern Europe to reveal the representation of immigrant suffering in fiction. Applying immigrant psychology to literary analysis, Madelaine Hron examines the ways in which different forms of physical and psychological pain are expressed in a wide variety of texts. She juxtaposes post-colonial and post-communist concerns about immigration, and contrasts Muslim world views with those of Caribbean creolité and post-Cold War ethics. Demonstrating how pain is translated into literature, she explores the ways in which it also shapes narrative, culture, history, and politics. A compelling and accessible study, Translating Pain is a groundbreaking work of literary and postcolonial studies.

Using case-studies from East and Southeast Asia, this book examines sexuality and AIDS-related sexual risk in the context of Asian cultures. It offers a complementary perspective, documented with sociological and anthropological data, to historical studies and looks at commercial sex work, kinship systems, matrimonial strategies, gender, power relations, and the relevance of cultural constructs such as Confucianism and Taoism for the analysis of sexual cultures in Asia.

In occupied Belgium during World War II, Paul de Man (1919-1983) wrote music, lecture, and exhibition reviews, a regular book column, interviews, and articles on cultural politics for the Brussels daily newspaper Le Soir. From December 1940 until he resigned in November 1942, de Man contributed almost 200 articles to this and another newspaper, both then controlled by Nazi sympathizers and vocal advocates of the "new order." Later to become one of the most respected and influential literary theorists in America, de Man, then 21 and 22 years old, wrote primarily as the chief literary critic for Le Soir. His weekly column reviewed the latest novels and poetry from Belgium, France, Germany, and England. De Man commented extensively on major propaganda expositions, and interviewed leading writers and cultural figures, including Paul Valéry and the future Vichy Education minister Abel Bonnard. The political extremes of de Man's wartime writing are marked by two articles. His single anti-Semitic article, "Les Juifs dans la littérature actuelle" (4 March 1941), acquiesces in the deportation of Jews to "a Jewish colony isolated from Europe." But de Man later argued in defense of a Resistance-linked journal ("A propos de la revue Messages," 14 July 1942) against the "totalitarian" censors' "unconsidered attacks." This volume reprints in facsimile all of de Man's articles in Le Soir as well as three articles he wrote prior to the occupation in 1940 as editor of the liberal Cahiers du Libre Examen. It also includes English translations of the ten articles written in Flemish for the Antwerp paper Het Vlaamsche Land, in March-October 1942. The collection appears under the auspices of the Oxford Literary Review, England's leading theoretical journal for over a decade.

Kafka pensait que la tuberculose était le " germe de la mort ", Georg Groddeck affirmait que " ce qui n'est pas fatal n'a rien à voir avec le cancer ". A partir des métaphores suscitées par ces deux maladies, Susan Sontag analyse aussi bien les sources médicales et psychiatriques que les textes littéraires, de l'antiquité aux temps modernes, de Keats, Dickens, Baudelaire, James à Mann, Joyce, Mansfield et Auden. Battant en brèche la théorie du XIXe siècle qui suppose un type de personnalité prédisposée psychologiquement à la tuberculose, elle examine et conteste les interprétations psychologiques de notre siècle qui ne sont qu'un spiritualisme sublimé. Elle démystifie les fantasmes idéologiques qui démontrent certaines maladies et, par extension, culpabilisent les malades. En observant la rhétorique qui s'inspire de l'art militaire dès que les théoriciens de la politique (de Machiavel à Hitler, en passant par Nietzsche, Marinetti, Gramsci et Trotski) emploient l'imagerie de la maladie, Susan Sontag dénonce dans un essai aussi vif qu'argumenté cet abus de langage qui ferait de la maladie une métaphore. Après le cancer, c'est aujourd'hui le sida qui, tel un aimant, attire la limaille de nos effrois et de nos hantises, car le sida réactive le spectre de l'épidémie, dont le monde moderne se croyait enfin débarrassé. Certains en font " la peste " de notre fin de millénaire, le châtement infligé par Dieu aux groupes " déviants " ; pour les néo-conservateurs, l'Apocalypse rôde, les exclusions s'imposent, la " moralisation des mœurs " balaie leur " libération " des années soixante. Susan Sontag dénonce ce catastrophisme qui justifie un contrôle accru de l'Etat à travers le sida, elle nous propose une réflexion extraordinaire d'intelligence et de culture historique, littéraire, philosophique sur la propension qu'a l'homme à s'emparer d'une maladie pour y greffer ses métaphores les moins innocentes. The Return of Scepticism Delphi Classics

In recognition of the year 2000 and its significance for the Christian world, religion provides the common thread that binds together the book's variety of subject matter, concerns and methodologies. This compilation of eleven papers focuses on politics, museums, religion and war; reports and surveys; as well as research based on the collections.

The life of Antonin Artaud (1896-1948) was tormented by physical and mental illnesses. Already in his earlier works, Artaud tried to express his physical and mental suffering, but perceived, in describing his feelings, the obstructive and illness-inducing role of language. This is the first book written in English that analyses the role of a healing language with which Artaud engaged in his later writings. Joeri Visser guides us through the years in which Artaud suffered increasingly from mental instability and considered the act of writing his only means of survival. In doing so, Visser unfolds a literary and a philosophical analysis of how language and life work together and how a creative play with language can help us to reengage sustainably with the joyous as well as the terrible forces of life.
