It describes young Ocean's habit of watching his father shower through a keyhole and listening to him sing. As the poem recounts, however, young Ocean's father caught him spying one day to unknown consequence. As the poem closes, this personalized speaker—a poetic externalization of Ocean's self, reflects that the "cost" of being caught listening to his father was to "lose / [his] way back." Night Sky with Exit Wounds "Threshold" Summary and ...
