 Under Sentence of Death By Victor Hugo
Der englische und französische Sozialroman des 19. Jahrhunderts und seine Rezeption in Deutschland BoD - Books on Demand Deeply shocking in its time, this is a profound and moving tale and a vital work of social commentary. A man vilified by society and condemned to death for his crime wakes every morning knowing that this day might be his last. With the hope for release his only comfort, he spends his hours recounting his life and the time before his imprisonment. But as the hours pass, he knows that he is powerless to change his fate. He must follow the path so many have trod before him--the path that leads to the guillotine.

Voilà cinq semaines que j'habite avec cette pensée, toujours seul avec elle, toujours glacé de sa présence, toujours courbé sous son poids?!Autrefois, car il me semble qu'il y a plutôt des années que des semaines, j'étais un homme comme un autre homme. Chaque jour, chaque heure, chaque minute avait son idée. Mon esprit, jeune et riche, était plein de fantaisies. Il s'amusait à me les dérouler les unes après les autres, sans ordre et sans fin, brochant d'inépuisables arabesques cette rude et mince étoffe de la vie. C'étaient des jeunes filles, de splendides chapes d'évêque, des batailles gagnées, des théâtres pleins de bruit et de lumière, et puis encore des jeunes filles et de sombres promenades la nuit sous les larges bras des marronniers. C'était toujours fête dans mon imagination. Je pouvais penser à ce que je voulais, j'étais libre.

Le dernier jour d'un condamné (1829) par l'illustre écrivain Victor

Hugo, French Edition Enrichie, Biographie, Informations, Résumé Victor Hugo a vingt-six ans quand il écrit, en deux mois et demi, Le Dernier Jour d'un Condamné, roman qui constitue sans doute le réquisitoire le plus véhément jamais prononcé contre la peine de mort. Nous ne saurons pas qui est le Condamné, nous ne saurons rien du crime qu'il a commis. Car le propos de l'auteur n'est pas d'entrer dans un débat mais d'exhiber l'horreur et l'absurdité de la situation dans laquelle se trouve n'importe quel homme à qui l'on va trancher le cou dans quelques heures. Ce roman - aux accents souvent étrangement modernes - a une telle puissance de suggestion que le lecteur finit par s'identifier au narrateur dont il partage tour à tour l'angoisse et les vaines espérances. Jusqu'aux dernières lignes du livre, le génie de Victor Hugo nous fait participer à une attente effarée: celle du bruit grinçant que fera le couperet se précipitant dans les rails de la guillotine. Quiconque aura lu ce livre n'oubliera plus jamais cette saisissante leçon d'écriture et d'humanité.

Presented as the diary of a death row inmate written during the last twenty-four hours of his life, in which he recounts his experiences from the verdict of his trial to the moment of his execution - some five weeks of his life. This account, a long interior monologue, is interspersed with anguished reflections and memories of his other life, the "life before".

Under Sentence of Death Or A Criminal's Last Hours By Victor Hugo Translated By Sir Bart Gilbert Campbell Sentenced to death! For five whole weeks have I lived with this one thought, always alone with it, always frozen by its ghastly presence, always crushed beneath its overwhelming weight. At first, years ago, as it seemed, not mere weeks as it really was, I was a man like any other. Every day, every hour, every minute was ruled by its own idea. My intellect, young and fresh, lost itself in a world of fantasy. I amused myself in mapping out a life without order, and without end, weaving into a thousand fantastic patterns the coarse and slender tissue of my existence. There were lovely girls, cardinals' copes, victories won, theatres full of life and light, and then again the young girls, and walks in the twilight under the spreading boughs of the chestnut trees. My imagination always pictured scenes of pleasure. My thoughts were free, and therefore I was free also. But now I am a prisoner. My body is in irons in a dungeon, and my soul is fettered by an idea--one horrible, murderous, and implacable idea. I have but one thought, one certainty, one deep-rooted conviction, and that is that I am under sentence of death! Do what I may, that one terrible thought is ever with me, like a spectre by my side, lonely and jealous, driving away every effort that I may make to liberate myself from its presence, face to face with me, and clutching me with its icy hand when I endeavour to turn aside my head, or to close my eyes upon its horrifying existence.

Le Dernier Jour d'un condamné est un roman à thèse de Victor Hugo publié en 1829 qui constitue un plaidoyer politique pour l'abolition de la peine de mort. Roman Le dernier jour d'un condamné suivi de Claude Gueux.

Der letzte Tag eines Verurteilten BoD - Books on Demand

Résumé : Le roman se présente comme le journal d'un condamné à mort écrit durant les vingt-quatre dernières heures de son existence dans lequel il raconte ce qu'il a vécu depuis le début de son procès jusqu'au moment de son exécution, soit environ six semaines de sa vie. Ce récit, long monologue intérieur, est entrecoupé de réflexions angoissées et de souvenirs de son autre vie, la "vie d'avant". Le lecteur ne connaît ni le nom de cet homme, ni ce qu'il a fait pour être condamné, mis à part la phrase : « moi, misérable qui ai commis un véritable crime, qui ai versé du sang ! ». L'oeuvre se présente comme un témoignage brut, à la fois sur l'angoisse du condamné à mort et ses dernières pensées, les souffrances quotidiennes morales et physiques qu'il subit et sur les conditions de vie des prisonniers, par exemple dans la scène du ferrage des forçats. Il exprime ses sentiments sur sa vie antérieure et ses états d'âme.... Il se fera exécuter sous la clameur du peuple qui voit sa mort comme un spectacle.

Contexte : Victor Hugo rencontre plusieurs fois le spectacle de la guillotine et s'indigne de ce que la société se permet de faire de sang-froid ce qu'elle reproche à l'accusé d'avoir fait. C'est au lendemain d'une traversée de la place de l'Hôtel-de-Ville où le bourreau graissait la guillotine en prévision de l'exécution prévue le soir même que Victor Hugo se lance dans l'écriture du Dernier Jour d'un condamné qu'il achève très rapidement. Le livre est édité en février 1829 par l'éditeur Charles Gosselin mais sans nom d'auteur. Ce n'est que trois ans plus tard, le 15 mars 1832, que Victor Hugo complète son roman par une longue préface qu'il signe de son nom.

The Last Days of a Condemned Rodopi

Victor-Marie Hugo (1802-1885) was a French poet, playwright, novelist, essayist, visual artist, statesman, human rights campaigner, and perhaps the most influential exponent of the Romantic movement in France. In France, Hugo's literary reputation rests primarily on his poetic and dramatic output and only secondarily on his novels. Among many volumes of poetry, Les Contemplations and La Légende des Siècles stand particularly high in critical esteem, and Hugo is sometimes identified as the greatest French poet. In the English-speaking world his best-known works are often the novels Les Misérables and Notre-Dame de Paris (translated into English as The Hunchback of Notre-Dame) (1899). Though extremely conservative in his youth, Hugo moved to the political left as the decades passed; he became a passionate supporter of republicanism, and his work touches upon most of the political and social issues and artistic trends of his time. He is buried in the Pantheon. Amongst his other works are: Napoleon the Little (1852), The Man Who Laughs (1869), The History of a Crime (1877), Poems (1888) and The Memoirs of Victor Hugo.

"Under Sentence of Death - Or, a Criminal's Last Hours" is a fictional account of the trial and sentencing of a man that ultimately leads to his death. A thought-provoking insight to a criminal's last moments, "Under Sentence of Death" is not to be missed by fans of Hugo's work, and it would make for a worthy addition to any collection. Victor Marie Hugo (1802 - 1885) was a French novelist, dramatist, and poet belonging to the Romantic movement. He is widely hailed as one of the most accomplished and well-known French writers, originally achieving renown for his poetical endeavours—the most notable of which are the volumes "Les Contemplations" and "La Légende des siècles". Outside of his native country, Hugo's best-known works are his novels: "Les Misérables" (1862) and "Notre-Dame de Paris" (1831), commonly known as "The Hunchback of Notre-Dame". Many vintage books such as this are becoming increasingly scarce and expensive. We are republishing this book now in an affordable, high-quality, modern edition complete with a specially commissioned new biography of the author.

The Last Day of a Condemned Man [Le Dernier jour d'un condamné] Victor Hugo Translated by Eugenia De B. The Last Day of a Condemned Man (French: Le Dernier Jour d'un Condamné) is a short novel by Victor Hugo first published in 1829. The novel recounts the thoughts of a man condemned to die. Victor Hugo wrote this novel to express his feelings that the death penalty should be abolished. At the head of the earlier editions of this work, published at first without the name of the author, there was nothing but the following lines. "There are two ways of accounting for the existence of this work. Either there really has been found a bundle of yellow, ragged, papers, on which were inscribed, exactly as they came, the last thoughts of a wretched being; or else there has been a man, a dreamer, occupied in observing nature for the advantage of art, a philosopher, a poet, who, having been seized with these forcible ideas, could not rest until he had given them the tangible form of a volume. Of these two explanations, the reader will choose that which he prefers." As is seen, at the time when this book was first published, the author did not deem fit to give publicity to the full extent of his thoughts. He preferred waiting to see whether the work would be fully understood. It has been. The author may now, therefore, unmask the political and social ideas, which he wished to render popular under this harmless literary guise. He avows openly, that The Last Day of a Condemned is only a pleading, direct or indirect, as is preferred, for the abolition of the penalty of death. His design herein and what he would wish posterity to see in his work, if its attention should ever be given to so slight a production, is, not to make out the special defense of any particular criminal, such defense being transitory as it is easy; he would plead generally and permanently for all accused persons, present and future; it is the great point of human right, stated and pleaded before society at large, that highest judicial court; it is the sombre and fatal question which breathes obscurely in the depths of each capital offense, under the triple envelopes of pathos in which legal eloquence wraps them; it is the question of life and death, I say, laid bare, denuded and despoiled of the sonorous twistings of the bar, revealed in daylight, and placed where it should be seen; in its true and hideous position, not in the law courts, but on the scaffold, not among the judges, but with the executioner! This is what he has desired to effect. If futurity should award him the glory of having succeeded, which he dares not hope, he desires no other crown.

1923 erscheint im kleinen, aber bedeutenden, weil politisch engagierten Berliner Malik Verlag Victor Hugos »Die letzten Tages eines Verurteilten« in der Übersetzung von Alfred Wolfenstein. Hugos Text liest sich als ergreifende Anklageschrift gegen die Todesstrafe und zeigt seinen Autor als politisch aufgeklärten Schriftsteller. Dessen Protest gegen die Todesstrafe ist nicht nur historisch situiert, denn auch heute noch sind derartige Verurteilungen in vielen Ländern an der Tagesordnung, ohne dass die Abschaffung der Todesstrafe allgemeiner Konsens selbst in der sogenannten Zivilgesellschaft wäre. Alfred Wolfenstein reiht sich wenig später mit seinem Drama »Die Nacht vor dem Beil« (1929) in die Reihe der literarisch-publizistischen Kritiker ein, die in dieser Strafe einen groben Verstoß gegen die Menschenrechte und einen Rückfall in vorzivilisatorische Zeiten sehen. Mit diesem Theaterstück kämpft er gegen die Verletzung der Menschenwürde an und schlägt sich damit auf die Seite Victor Hugos. Hugo stellt im ersten Satz seiner Einleitung klar: »Der letzte Tag eines Verurteilten« ist nichts anderes als eine Schrift gegen die Todesstrafe. [...] Ich kenne kein ehrenvolleres, kein edleres Ziel als dieses, die Abschaffung der Todesstrafe.«

Beide Autoren, Victor Hugo ebenso wie sein Übersetzer, der Schriftsteller Alfred Wolfenstein, sehen in ihrer Kunst ein legitimes Mittel der Anklage – in der Hoffnung, mittels Literatur Aufklärung über politische Fehler zu betreiben.
