The Big Indian Wedding Athabasca University Press

Welcome to my twelfth book! Most folks are impressed to find I'm a published author, but the publishing world has transformed like many things these last few years. Having a book published is not that big of a deal. If you like this one, you can find my other books on Amazon.com. I hope you find my stories and ideas helpful. Most are written early morning and have some tie to a recent event or thought. I've always written for myself, but with the amount of content that comes from my mind, I finally thought, "why not share?" I now call my daily writings, Word Soup. I publish daily on LinkedIn, Facebook, Twitter, and I have a small email group that gets my daily soup in their inbox. I have enough content for ten more books, and I add to that every morning. If you like my work, tell your friends and family; if you don't like my work, keep your comments to yourself. No need to push your negative thoughts on others. Thanks for allowing me to share a little of me with you! 5:31 a.m., coffee is dark and luxurious, the fireplace is burning to my right, and I have a front-row seat to the sun rising, the sky is pink. Welcome to my morning word soup, where an aging white guy tells you what he's thinking. I do this daily, have been doing it for a few years, some like my word soup whilst others are angered by my messages. But I don't mind those that are angered; they are spending energy on things that might be better directed for good. I no longer get angry; I let go of that emotion long ago. I choose to love and embrace all that exists: the good, the bad, the ugly, the marginalized parts of our world. Anger is a wasted emotion. I do have some fans, people that enjoy my soup. I like those folks, their feedback, input, corrections when I make a mistake; there are a lot of kind people in this world. I choose to lean into the kind folks and appreciate those that have less than a favorable view of myself and my work. I'm not for everyone, and neither are you. I've written before about my 8% rule. I think that I'm a fit for about 8% of the population, the other 92% for various reasons don't connect with me or my views, and that is fine. Imagine walking into a room with 100 people; eight will fit your tribe, the other 92 will be lukewarm at best; but those eight, wow, you and those eight people can change the world. Can I share that this sunrise this morning is a gift? I mean something bigger than myself is giving me a show that is better than any movie; it's like a painting in action. I am writing a paragraph and then stopping and taking in this masterpiece. Excuse me while I watch the sun make her first appearance. If you don't know, I live in paradise with a Queen. I live on top of a mountain, I'm blessed, lucky and don't think I'll be leaving here any time soon. I am open to travel, but my Queen is on the cautious side, she makes our rules, I simply follow. Her rule is not to get on a plane until the end of July; woe is me, I'm stuck with a beautiful woman on top of a mountain. Add me to the prayer chain, please. Be Kind.

Now the Netflix Limited Series Unbelievable, starring Toni Collette, Merritt Wever, and Kaitlyn Dever • Two Pulitzer Prize-winning journalists tell the riveting true crime story of a teenager charged with lying about having been raped—and the detectives who followed a winding path to arrive at the truth. “Gripping . . . [with a] John Grisham-worthy twist.”—Emily Bazelon, New York Times Book Review (Editors’ Choice) On August 11, 2008, eighteen-year-old Marie reported that a masked man broke into her apartment near Seattle, Washington, and raped her. Within days police and even those closest to Marie became suspicious of her story. The police swiftly pivoted and began investigating Marie. Confronted with inconsistencies in her story and the doubts of others, Marie broke down and said her story was a lie—a bid for attention. Police charged Marie with false reporting, and she was branded a liar. More than two years later, Colorado detective Stacy Galbraith was assigned to investigate a case of sexual assault. Describing the crime to her husband that night, Galbraith learned that the case bore an eerie resemblance to a rape that had taken place months earlier in a nearby town. She joined forces with the detective on that case, Edna Hendershot, and the two soon discovered they were dealing with a serial rapist: a man who photographed his victims, threatening to release the images online, and whose calculated steps to erase all physical evidence suggested he might be a soldier or a cop. Through meticulous police work the detectives would eventually connect the rapist to other attacks in Colorado—and beyond.

Based on investigative files and extensive interviews with the principals, Unbelievable is a serpentine tale of doubt, lies, and a hunt for justice, unveiling the disturbing truth of how sexual assault is investigated today—and the long history of skepticism toward rape victims. Previously published as A False Report The Truth about Uri Geller Duke University Press

In a sprawling Indian city, a boy ventures into its most dangerous corners to find his missing classmate. . . . Through market lanes crammed with too many people, dogs, and rickshaws, past stalls that smell of cardamom and sizzling oil, below a smoggy sky that doesn’t let through a single blade of sunlight, and all the way at the end of the Purple metro line lies a jumble of tin-roofed homes where nine-year-old Jai lives with his family. From his doorway, he can spot the glittering lights of the city’s fancy high-rises, and though his mother works as a maid in one, to him they seem a thousand miles away. Djinn Patrol on the Purple Line plunges readers deep into this neighborhood to trace the unfolding of a tragedy through the eyes of a child as he has his first perilous collisions with an unjust and complicated wider world. Jai drools outside sweet shops, watches too many reality police shows, and considers himself to be smarter than his friends Pari (though she gets the best grades) and Faiz (though Faiz has an actual job). When a classmate goes missing, Jai decides to use the crime-solving skills he has picked up from TV to find him. He asks Pari and Faiz to be his assistants, and together they draw up lists of people to interview and places to visit. But what begins as a game turns sinister as other children start disappearing from their neighborhood. Jai, Pari, and Faiz have to confront terrified parents, an indifferent police force, and rumors of soul-snatching djinns. As the disappearances edge ever closer to home, the lives of Jai and his friends will never be the same again. Drawing on real incidents and a spate of disappearances in metropolitan India, Djinn Patrol on the Purple Line is extraordinarily moving, flawlessly imagined, and a triumph of suspense. It captures the fierce warmth, resilience, and bravery that can emerge in times of trouble and carries the reader headlong into a community that, once encountered, is impossible to forget.

Six were taken. Eleven years later, five come back--with no idea of where they've been. A riveting mystery for fans of We Were Liars. Eleven years ago, six kindergartners went missing without a trace. After all that time, the people left behind moved on, or tried to. Until today. Today five of those kids return. But she thinks she remembers Lucas. Lucas remembers Scarlett, too, except they're entirely unable to recall where they've been or what happened to them. Neither of them remember the sixth victim, Max--the only one who hasn't come back. Which leaves Max's sister, Avery, wanting answers. She wants to find her brother--dead or alive--and isn't buying this whole memory-loss story. The story of Listening Now takes place before the events of Appachana's 2023 critically acclaimed novel, Fear and Lovely. Mallika, a child given to weaving, is convinced that the lives of the mothers around her are dull and devoid of passion and fantasizes romantic love. The truth, which lies at the heart of this story, is completely different. Her mother, Padma, her mother's sister, Shanta, her mother's two friends, Madhu and Anu, and her grandmother, Rukmini, all hold wrenching secrets; their complex lives and longings are beyond the child Mallika's comprehension. Set in 1950s and 1960s, this story encompasses the lives of two generations of women in a small, New Delhi neighbourhood, where conventional lives are lived on the surface, while below, secrets seethe—threatening to destroy everything that has been so carefully constructed to accommodate society's structures and expectations.
